Montag commits murder. “And then he was a shrieking blaze, a jumping, sprawling, gibbering manikin, no longer human or known, all writhing flame on the lawn as Montag shot one continuous pulse of liquid fire on him.” (119/121)	The Mechanical Hound is “killed”.
Montag is in pain.	(Find a metaphor. Any from this section.)
In the future (for Bradbury), people will listen to “earbuds” constantly.	Montag retrieves the hidden books.
The police are searching for Montag (as he’s on the run).	Montag “plants” books at a fellow fireman’s house.
